Theological and Pastoral Implications for World Christianity of Violence against Women

Domestic Violence is incompatible with Christian faith, yet is practised in congregations world-wide at almost the life-time frequency (from 20-70%) as in each general population. The World Council of Churches Decade against Domestic Violence in the 90s was not accompanied by any obvious change in either seminary teaching or preaching, and yet the issue has been written about in many texts including St John Chrysostom (5thC), the 1563 Anglican Homily on Matrimony, Cotton Mather's 1710 sermon in Boston, Mass, etc. The talk will set out general issues of theology with particular material being drawn from Malaysia, Myanmar-Burma, Taiwan, Korea, Australia, USA, and UK.
